Online Classroom – Rules of Engagement

UNIVERSITY PROPRIETARY / SENSITIVE INFORMATION DISCLAIMER

Dunlap-Stone University's electronic classroom is an open academic environment that promotes a free, open and honest exchange of experiences and ideas. One of the many benefits of having participants from around the world with a wide range of disciplines and diverse backgrounds is sharing lessons learned, positive and negative.

Each individual (instructor and student alike) has an obligation to be sensitive to subjects that may or may not be suitable for discussion in the classroom. It may be appropriate to sanitize a situation, not discuss it or discuss it off-line. Instructors will generally tell you if your sensitive discussion is inappropriate for the classroom, but it is still each individual's responsibility to insure sensitive information is kept confidential.

Generally the DSU policy states that which is discussed in the virtual classroom stays there. Classroom discussion is intended to be a non-attribution off-the-record exchange. We ask everyone to be keenly aware of ethical and possible conflict of interest concerns as well. Discussing all the details of a potential disclosure with your classmates is not prudent.

Revealing knowledge of an actual or potential violation of the law places Dunlap-Stone University, the course instructor and your classmates in a bad situation. You could also jeopardize yourself and your company. Therefore, we ask each of you to use your best judgment and discretion when raising issues or responding. The goal is to maximize this valuable and unique learning experience without sacrificing anything.

We Appreciate Your Support & Cooperation-
